Senate rejects treaty bid

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate on Wednesday overwhelmingly repelled the first attack by Republican conservatives on the U.S.-Soviet medium-range missile treaty.

The Senate voted 91-6 to shelve a bill by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to ban debate on the treaty on grounds that Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev was not duly authorized to sign it.

The Senate's rejection of that claim as the first test vote on the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces or INF treaty.

The treaty would ban all U.S. and Soviet missiles with ranges of 300 to 400 miles.

Gorbachev's signature was invalid, Helms claimed, because he signed as general secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, not as a duly authorized representative of the Soviet state, because he is only the head of a political party, not an official member of the Soviet government.

The attempt to derail Senate consideration of the pact came after senators of both parties hailed the treaty as an important first step toward worldwide arms control and appealed for swift ratification before President Reagan's summit meeting with Gorbachev in Moscow. The summit begins May 29.

But as debate got under way, Helms, apparently beginning a long series of delaying tactics, raised a point of order and claimed that the treaty was invalid because Gorbachev's signature was on it.

"The fact remains that this document now at the desk is not binding on the Soviet Union," Helms contended. "It is only an agreement between the president of the United States and the head of a foreign political party."

Said Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, "If the time comes the Soviets find it convenient to roll out the SS-20's they may have hidden, they can say the treaty was signed by an invalid signature of someone who had no business doing it."

But Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said it was clear from the circumstances when the treaty was signed last Dec. 8 that Gorbachev had "full authority to represent his nation."

"It is clear that Mr. Gorbachev and no one else in that delegation was the chief representative of the Soviet Union," Pell said.

"Treaty making is a matter of common sense and wise judgment," said Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chosen to lead the debate on the Republican side of the aisle.

"There is no substance whatsoever to the claim that the treaty was not legally signed," said Lugar.

Helms bridled at suggestions that he was raising technical objections to the treaty for the sake of delay, saying: "What is occurring is not dilatory but is instead and in fact deliberative."

Those voting against tabling the Helms point of order were Helms, Symms and Sens. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H.; James McClure, R-Idaho; Larry Pressler, R-S.D.; and Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.

Not voting were: Sens. Joseph R. Biden, D-Del.; Lawton Chiles, D-Fla.; and Patrick J. Moynihan, D-N.Y.

Ex-prisoner to speak today

DOUG GIBSON
Senior Reporter

In 1968 Anthony Bryant dedicated himself to the overthrow of the United States government. Now he sees his life as a mission to preserve Bryant will speak today at 10 a.m. in the Varsity Theater and tonight at 8 p.m. at the Excelsior Hotel.

Twenty years ago Bryant, who already had a long conviction record of crimes ranging from armed robbery to narcotics dealing, joined the Black Panthers and regularly smuggled arms from Cuba into the United States that were used toward the rest of overthrowing the United States.

In 1969 he and his cohorts hijacked Pan American Airlines Flight 97 en route from Miami to New York and forced the plane to land in Cuba. Upon arrival Bryant expected to be greeted as a hero.

Instead, because he had robbed a passenger on the plane who was a

Castro, Bryant was sent to prison in his own country and was sent to hell for 12 years.

Bryant, by his account, was consistently beaten and abused, suffered mental and physical injury and often deprived of food and water during his confinement.

He regards himself as lucky and that other Cuban prisoners, particularly the political dissidents, face worse fates.

According to Bryant, among other inmates in Cuban prisons, women and children are raped, women are tortured by the hair to interrogations, men are broken by rifle butts and limbs amputated because prison doctors don't want to bother with treatment.

Released with other Americans as part of a U.S./Cuban agreement, Bryant returned home despite facing possible prosecution for the hijacking. His goal was, he said, to warn Americans of the horror they face if the United States one day succumbs to communism.

He now crisscrosses the nation relating his experiences and speaking on what he perceives to be the evil of communism and the threat it poses toward the United States. He also authored the book "Hijack," an account of his life and imprisonment in Cuba.

Bryant said the United States is not doing enough to counter the rise of communism and blames the president, his administration, the media and congressmen who are, he claims, traitors and paid Soviet agents.

Those who downplay the Central American Marxist threat are playing into the communist's hands, said Bryant. "There are cruise missiles in Cuba right now. I saw them. Our administration denies that, but they're lying," he said. He adds that if communism is solidified in Nicaragua, missiles will be installed that can reach the United States from another angle besides that of Cuba.

Bryant does not mince words when he accuses the "peacemakers and traitors in Congress" for keeping the U.S. public uninformed about the dangers of Marxism. "When communist countries slaughter their own people, when they make outrageous attacks against this nation, they (Congress and the media) don't even become indignant. It's because our spiritual values, our moral values have collapsed," he said.

"So that leaves nothing left for this nation except to live under slavery, unless they are awakened immediately, and I mean before this next election," he said.

Governatorial rival Merrill Cook, who is running as an independent in the November election, accused the governor of trying to buy votes. "A check to Utahns isn't doing enough to stimulate the economy," he said.

Searle admits that many letters have been received stressing a need to use the surplus for education but maintains the governor will not back down from a previous promise to reimburse Utahns.

He was an effervescent kind of person. He never seemed to run out of energy and yet was a very kindly person," he said.

"I'm a private pilot, and he and I used to talk about flying," said Raisor. "He's had many cross-country flights. I never flew with him, but I'm sure he was a good pilot."

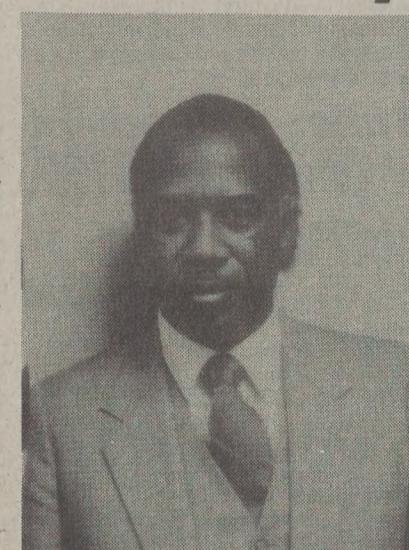

Albuquerque police Sgt. R.C. Porter said it was raining at the time of the crash, which witnesses said occurred about 5 p.m.

Coronado Airport Manager Jim Dean said the accident occurred a couple of miles south of the airport.

Melissa Brown attended BYU in 1980 and in 1984, according to Eileen M. Farnsworth, a senior from Elmira, N.Y., majoring in nursing and personal friend of the family. "She was just wonderful. Everybody loved her."

Farnsworth said, "She was a good example in the Church, a great mother and a great wife."

Wayne Brown worked at the University of Utah as the dean of the Department of Engineering and mechanical engineering professor, according to the University of Utah

ANTHONY BRYANT

America's future is bleak if the nation does not become aware of communist expansion plans, said Bryant.

"I see a future world of communism... and the scenario, which hopefully won't come to pass, but based on current events seems logical; the Sandinista government stabilized, the fall of the rest of Central America, a U.S. Congress packed with pro-communist, ultra liberal leftist elements more than they are today. This will set the groundwork for terrorist activities within the United States," said Bryant.

Bryant predicts an assassination of a major black leader (Jesse Jackson) creating racial chaos and the eventual instigation of martial law and a U.S. populace seeking protection from a government that lacks the will to protect its people. "That will lead to a military dictatorship and eventual coup d'etat," he said.

"So that leaves nothing left for this nation except to live under slavery, unless they are awakened immediately, and I mean before this next election," he said.

Governatorial rival Merrill Cook, who is running as an independent in the November election, accused the governor of trying to buy votes. "A check to Utahns isn't doing enough to stimulate the economy," he said.

Officials sign land lease Controversy over Jerusalem Center ends

By DORAN JOHNSON
University Staff Writer

The years of negotiations and controversy over the BYU Jerusalem Center ended Wednesday after BYU officials signed a formal land-lease agreement for the center, according to a BYU spokesman.

President Jeffrey R. Holland and Elder Howard W. Hunter, representing the BYU Board of Trustees and acting president of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, signed a 49-year renewable lease for the center Wednesday morning in the office of Yehuda Ziv, district officer for the Jerusalem Lands Authority. Elder James E. Faust of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles accompanied President Holland and Elder Hunter.

According to BYU spokesman Paul C. Richards, the signing of the lease was in response to an 11-4 vote approving the lease by the Israeli cabinet on May 8.

President Holland said he was ecstatic and felt a sense of immense relief.

"It's been eight years of constant attention, effort and anxiety," he said.

"We are pleased," said President Holland. "The government officials we have dealt with are pleased. We have been made to feel welcome."

The center received heated protests by a small group of ultra-Orthodox Jews in 1985 and 1986 who feared proselytizing, said BYU religion professor Monte S. Nyman.

Haws A. Marble, who works with travel-study tours in Israel, said, "There has not been, to my knowledge, public protests against the center since April of 1986."

Richards said the lease contains an addendum which prohibits proselytizing or missionary activity on the part of the LDS Church or BYU.

The lease also establishes a five-member oversight committee responsible for reviewing any public gathering which citizens of Israel could attend, such as a recital, lecture or drama, said Richards.

The committee will also have jurisdiction to review any proselytizing or missionary actions on the part of the students, Richards said.

"If the committee finds that the allegations (concerning proselytizing) are factual," said Richards, "it will report that to the center, which has the authority to dismiss students from the program."

Bangerter's proposal causes unrest

By DOUG GIBSON
Senior Reporter

What to do with Utah's $70 million tax surplus has put Gov. Norman Bangerter at odds with some legislators and groups who want the surplus to go toward education.

Bangerter was instrumental in pushing through the Utah Legislature a $160 million tax increase in 1987.

Now he seeks to convene a June 15 legislative session to decide what to do with the surplus $70 million.

Political pundits say a rebate totaling $100 per Utahn would be a boost to Bangerter's re-election campaign, but in recent weeks pressure has mounted from business and political leaders to use the money toward education. At a recent breakfast, the governor was urged by business leaders to use the surplus as a solid educational investment of the future.

Jordan School District was cited as an example of why the $70 million is needed. The district's budget is facing a $4.5 million cut, and advocates of using the money for education maintain that if Jordan were to share in the tax rebate, class sizes could be cut, media coordinator positions would survive and current educational programs could escape the ax.

This week both House Majority Leader Nolan Karris, R-Roy and Minority Leader Mike Dmitrich, D-Price, have hinted that rebates may not be the best answer. Karris has indicated he would like to put the issue on the November ballot instead of initiating the rebate by August as Bangerter has hoped would occur.

According to Bangerter's chief of staff Reed Searle, keeping the surplus money paid by Utahns could be akin to overcharging a customer and then refusing to give the money back when an error is discovered.

Searle admits that many letters have been received stressing a need to use the surplus for education but maintains the governor will not back down from a previous promise to reimburse Utahns.

Governatorial rival Merrill Cook, who is running as an independent in the November election, accused the governor of trying to buy votes. "A check to Utahns isn't doing enough to stimulate the economy," he said.

He was an effervescent kind of person. He never seemed to run out of energy and yet was a very kindly person," he said.

"I'm a private pilot, and he and I used to talk about flying," said Raisor. "He's had many cross-country flights. I never flew with him, but I'm sure he was a good pilot."

Albuquerque police Sgt. R.C. Porter said it was raining at the time of the crash, which witnesses said occurred about 5 p.m.

Coronado Airport Manager Jim Dean said the accident occurred a couple of miles south of the airport.

Cook said he favors the surplus being returned but added that the June 15 session should be the first part of two-phased plan to cut taxes. "In June sales taxes should be lowered, and then in January the restoration of deducting federal taxes from state income taxes should be initiated. This would ease Utah taxpayers' burdens by 28 percent," said Cook.

Democratic rival Ted Wilson said the governor should specify exactly how much of the $70 million surplus is due to the natural growth of the economy and how much of the surplus is due to the 1987 tax increase. "If any of the surplus is due to a natural growth of the economy, it should go to education," said Wilson campaign manager Rob Jolley.

Nielson asks Amtrak to change methods

By APRIL D. LOWRY
Senior Reporter

Amid discovery of Amtrak waste dumping in most western states, a U.S. Congressman said he will seek legislative action if the company does not take steps to halt the practices.

Rep. Howard Nielson, R-Utah, met with Amtrak officials, representatives from railroad workers unions, Gov. Norman Bangerter's staff and a House subcommittee on Tuesday, according to Nielson's spokeswoman Ruth McCormick.

The group was attempting to resolve the dilemma surrounding Amtrak's practices of discarding raw human sewage along rail routes in Utah.

Amtrak maintains that its dumping of untreated human waste from moving trains poses no health risk. Thomas Gillespie, vice president of government and public affairs for Amtrak, told Nielson that a 1978 report from the former Health, Education and Welfare Department (now the Department of Health and Human Services) indicated no evidence had ever been found that the dumping on tracks had resulted in disease. However, Nielson voiced his disbelief.

"Human waste can carry a number of diseases such as hepatitis, cholera, salmonella, strep and typhoid fever," said Nielson.

Art Lloyd, Amtrak's western region spokesman, said after the report was released in 1978 the government exempted Amtrak from public health services regulations.

The Amtrak officials told Nielson that the agency planned to take steps to ensure that dumping does not happen near train stations or where maintenance crews are working.

Reagan says politics could hurt drug war

NEW LONDON, Conn. — President Reagan said Wednesday the battle against illegal drugs is in danger of being "tripped up" by political debate, and proposed a bipartisan task force to find a consensus within 45 days on all aspects of the anti-narcotics campaign.

"If we cannot remove the politics from drugs, how can we hope to remove the drugs from our communities, workplaces and schools," Reagan said in a commencement address at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy.

Reagan's speech highlighted the growing importance of drugs as a political issue in the presidential campaign and on Capitol Hill. It has been a staple of Jesse Jackson's stump speeches, and is raised with increasing frequency by fellow Democrat Michael Dukakis and Republican George Bush.

Moreover, there is sharp criticism — from Republicans and Democrats alike, particularly in Congress — of an administration offer to drop drug-trafficking indictments against Panamanian military ruler Manuel Antonio Noriega in return for Noriega's agreement to relinquish power.

Reagan, standing under gray, rain-threatening skies, addressed 159 white-uniformed, graduating cadets and their relatives from a stage in front of the Thames River.

"Illegal drug use is the foremost concern in our country. And, frankly, as I finish my final year in office and look ahead, I worry that excessive drug policies might undermine effective drug policy," the president said.

Blast occurs in Soviet chemical factory

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union acknowledged Wednesday that something exploded at one of its chemical factories last week, but denied U.S. claims that it was rocket fuel used for a new long-range nuclear missile.

Gennady I. Gerasimov, Foreign Ministry spokesman, said three people were killed and five injured in the explosion May 12 in the plant at Pavlograd, about 500 miles southwest of Moscow in the Ukraine.

He said the chemicals involved were explosives used in civilian industry, not fuel for the new SS-24 intercontinental ballistic missile.

U.S. officials in Washington said Tuesday the Pavlograd plant is the sole facility for manufacturing the main rocket motors for the SS-24.

Gerasimov said in a telephone interview he did not know whether the plant made either the motors or fuel for them. He said the explosion occurred at 7:15 a.m. and that casualties were minimized because the storage area was highly automated.

One Washington source said U.S. spy satellites detected the explosion.

Iranian official discusses hostage safety

BEIRUT, Lebanon — If fighting between rival Shiite Moslem factions in south Beirut were stopped, the problem of 18 foreign hostages in Lebanon would be solved, an Iranian official said Wednesday.

Acting Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Mohammed Besharati made the announcement as Syria and Iran disagreed on ways to end 13 days of combat that has killed 243 people and wounded 762.

"The case of kidnapping (foreigners) in Lebanon is part of the crisis which Lebanon is passing through. I believe that if we could end the state of war currently prevailing, then definitely the other case would be solved too," said Besharati. Besharati has been mediating an end to the bloody dispute between the Iranian-backed Hezbollah — or Party of God — and the pro-Syrian Amal — Arabic for hope.

The Iranian envoy made the statement on the foreign hostages in response to reporters' questions after a meeting with acting Lebanese Prime Minister Salim Hoss. Most of the hostages, including nine Americans, are believed held by Hezbollah-affiliated Shiite zealots based in the 16-square-mile slums of south Beirut.

Book rates actuary as No. 1 occupation

CHICAGO — Few youngsters are likely to answer "actuary" to the question of what they want to be when they grow up, but a new book rates it as the best job of all.

Typical children's choices like doctor and astronaut ran far behind less glamorous professions such as computer programmers, statisticians and parole officers in "The Jobs Rated Almanac."

Actuaries — who statistically calculate personal risks due to sickness or disability — emerged No. 1 overall, as determined by the almanac's six criteria: salary, stress, work environment, outlook, security and physical demands. Jobs at the top of the book's list of 250 positions in the United States aren't necessarily the most prestigious or best paying because those jobs have other drawbacks, Almanac Editor and Publisher Les Krantz said.

Mike Vaughn, a 23-year-old actuary in training, said his annual salary of $31,000 "was probably 20 to 25 percent higher than any other job I could have gotten."

Nelson faces rape charges in Cedar City

CEDAR CITY — Convicted serial rapist Blaine H. Nelson has been ordered detained in the Iron County Jail pending arraignment on felony charges stemming from alleged sexual assaults of five Cedar City women.

Nelson, 33, an Ogden truck driver sentenced last week for rape and other offenses in Weber County, appeared Wednesday in 9th Circuit Court.

He was charged with five counts of aggravated sexual assault, five counts of aggravated burglary and one count of theft of a firearm and misdemeanor theft.

Judge Robert T. Braithwaite appointed James L. Shumate to defend Nelson, then set Nelson's bail.

No arraignment date was set, but the judge said Nelson must a plea within 10 days.

Nelson is accused of breaking into the homes of and assaulting five women. The series of crimes, committed between July 10 and Dec. 5, 1987, were described by Iron County Attorney Scott Burns as the "biggest crime scores" in Cedar City since three people were killed at a local tavern on Valentine's Day in 1984. Burns said all five women are prepared to testify.

Controversy still remains

UP&amp;L merger gains approval

By LISA A. BLIND
Universe Staff Writer

At a hearing Wednesday for the proposed merger between Utah Power & Light and PacifiCorp, former Secretary of Energy James R. Schlesinger voiced approval of the merger. However, controversy continues regarding the benefits of such a merger.

"This particular merger would provide substantial benefits through substantial cost savings — and thereby assist the several parties at interest," said Schlesinger in his prefiled testimony for the Public Service Commission.

The merger will permit the lowering of rates both in the short run and in the long run, said Schlesinger. He said, "The combined utility will have greater flexibility and use of its sources of power and will be able to produce power more efficiently. "The combined utility can have greater depth in technical and service personnel, thus permitting the enhancing of the quality of service," he said.

The upshot is clear: with more efficient utilization of capacity and of manpower resources and with lower costs, the merger should result in an enhancement of services to the domestic, commercial and industrial customers of Utah Power & Light," said Schlesinger.

He said the merger should also have an effect on economic development. "There is no question that this merger should have a favorable effect on economic development in the service areas and, particularly so, in the service area of Utah Power & Light."

Schlesinger, however, questioned the effect the merger would have on economic development. "That (the effect on economic development) depends upon other circumstances, some of which are not under the control of the company or even the states of the region," he said. "If we can improve upon past benefits (of UP&L) through this merger, then we should do so," said Schlesinger.

However, an analysis by the Committee of Consumer Services of the projected benefits of the merger indicates that the benefits would not be as great as they may seem.

The committee, which represents residential, small business and agriculture interests before the Public Service Commission, analyzed the projected benefits of the company, and it feels the merger will not provide the short-term benefits that have been predicted, said Jeff Williams, economist for the committee. "Although the committee does recognize the possibility of benefits accruing from the merger, the risk of short-to-medium-term transfers is a major concern," he said.

Company officials have testified that the merger will bring lower and stable rates to customers by creating a more efficient utility operation.

The company has pledged to lower rates for UP&L customers by 5 percent to 10 percent over four years following the merger, said UP&L spokesman John Ward. However, the Committee of Consumer Services wants to know where the reduction will occur, said Williams. Ward said, "an across-the-board 2 percent rate decrease will be sought for UP&L customers within 60 days" after the merger. The company cannot, however, guarantee such a reduction.

Sikh radicals surrender, ending siege of temple

Associated Press

AMRITSAR, India — Sikh radicals surrendered Wednesday after a 10-day siege and emerged from their revered Golden Temple.

Forty-five men and a woman emerged, hands in the air or clasped on their heads.

About 2,800 police, commandos and paramilitary troops surrounded the sacred compound, which has walls 20 feet high and covers the equivalent of five city blocks.

"No terrorist is inside the complex," said K.P.S. Gill, police chief of Punjab state. "All of them have come out."

The militants crossed an 8-foot-wide white marble walkway that provides the only access to the 400-year-old shrine, which sits in a vast pool where pilgrims bathe in peaceful times. The surrender took 45 minutes.

Gill said one radical tried to flee and was shot dead.

Three committed suicide by swallowing cyanide capsules. Another committed suicide by the same method Sunday.

Officials say 42 people, most of them militant Sikhs, were killed during the siege, bringing the death toll to 46, including suicides. The Golden Temple, Sikhism's holiest site, has been the center and symbol of Sikh militancy since the separatists began their terrorist war in 1982.

Elsewhere in Punjab, the only Indian state in which Sikhs are a majority, Sikh gunmen killed at least 40 people Tuesday and Wednesday. The victims included 31 itinerant Hindu laborers who were attacked in their tents Tuesday night.

Stolen equipment is valued at $7,485

By KATHRYN NELSON
Universe Staff Writer

Two computers and equipment valued at $7,485 were taken from BYU campus, according to a University Police spokesman.

The computer equipment was believed to be stolen Wednesday night or early Thursday morning from the Risk Management/Safety Office, located in the West Crandall House, said Paul Bringhurst, crime prevention specialist.

The stolen equipment consisted of two IBM computers, two monitors and one keyboard.

According to police reports, an unidentified employee said that when he left his office Wednesday at 9:30 p.m., his computer was intact. When he came in the next morning his computer was missing and items on the office were on the ground.

One computer was an IBM XT, serial No. 4236421. The other was an IBM PC, serial number 13739295150. The printer's serial number is 2441964682.

Pair of concerts feature professor

BYU professor Percy Kalt, a well-known Utah violinist, will appear as soloist with the Salt Lake Symphony in "An Evening in Vienna."

He will play in a pair of concerts Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the Assembly Hall on Temple Square in Salt Lake City. Performances are free.

Kalt's performances will include four works by the Vienna-born violinist and composer Fritz Kreisler: "Schoen Rosmarin," "Caprice Viennese," "Liebesfreud" and "Liebesleid." The symphony will offer traditional Vienna music fare, including the "Emperor Waltz," "Radetzky March," "Tritsch-Tratsch Polka," and the overture to the "Beautiful Galathea."

David Dalton, also a BYU music professor, directs the symphony, and calls this program "the most popular concert in our series, usually attended by large crowds."

Kalt is a Salt Lake City native and was a Fulbright scholar in Germany, where he became concertmaster of the Southwest German Chamber Orchestra. After joining the BYU faculty, he became a member of the Deseret String Quartet. Kalt earned his doctorate at the University of Michigan, where he performed with the Stanley Quartet.

OPINION

Congressional jobs shouldn't be made into life-long careers

As election year rears its patriotic head, Americans focus their attention upon electing the next president. America's Constitution limits each president to two terms, thus allowing both voters and new candidates opportunities for fresh visions in leadership. However, the two highest legislative bodies in the United States, the Senate and the House of Representatives, have no restrictions for the number of terms their members may serve. As American political life has evolved over the years, congressmen have developed their terms of service into lifetime careers. The original intent of the Constitution, however, was to keep government alive and accessible to the people, not to isolate congressmen as careermen.

As James Madison sought to establish a republic with a sound political philosophy, he was particularly concerned with elected officials. In "The Federalist Papers," Madison wrote that "the aim of every political constitution is, or ought to be, first to obtain for rulers men who possess most wisdom to discern, and most virtue to pursue, the common good of the society; and in the next place, to take the most effectual precautions for keeping them virtuous whilst they continue to hold their public trust." In order to insure this continued sense of virtue, Madison stressed the concept of limited terms of office. He proposed "a limitation of the term of appointments as will maintain a proper responsibility to the people."

Madison probably would be surprised to learn that, according to a Christian Science Monitor article, in 1986 the House reelection rate was 98 percent. That means little turnover in a legislature designed to operate by and for the people. The Senate reelection rate in 1986 was 75 percent, and this year "only eight of the 27 incumbents running are considered in serious jeopardy," according to the article.

There are several disadvantages of such incumbency rates. For example, a stagnant bureaucracy results as congressmen serve for years with relatively little opposition. As the same people return year after year to Congress, the same ideas and methods of operation are perpetuated. Newcomers to Congress are often frustrated by the rigidity of a system enforced by congressmen who have spent much of their lives in Congress. Freshmen quickly learn the rules of conformity and how to get along with their seniors. New ideas are in danger in such an environment. The Monitor article quotes Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., as saying "There's a kind of aristocracy that digs in here, no doubt about it."

Another disadvantage of continual Congressional terms is voter complacency. Faced with the same candidate year after year, voters are more likely to vote for the familiar name with little regard to the challenging newcomers. Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, said that "Ultimately, people care who you are more than what your party is." Congressmen learn how to please their constituents while in office and ensure their reelection without much comment on political issues. Rep. Jim Jontz, D-Ind., uses the majority of his time looking for employers to bring to his economically weak district. "Most of my work has nothing to do with ideology," he said.

Such attitudes are frightening for men who vote on a variety of national and international issues. Yet once such men are in office, they have great advantages over challengers for reelection. Incumbents have access to mailings and large staffs that their opponents don't. Political Action Committees (PACs) also provide funding for incumbents in disproportionate amounts to challengers. Last year PACs gave $12.3 million to incumbent senators but only $1 million to their opposition. Thus it is difficult for new candidates to gain the attention of the public.

The answer to the difficulties of incumbency challenging is limited terms. If the president is limited to two terms, why not limit congressmen also? New candidates with new ideas would enliven the ominous bureaucracy Congress has become. A continually shifting membership would allow flexibility in decision-making and original approaches to old problems and issues. Government will not be of, for and by the people until the people have fair opportunity to participate in its legislation.

Communist imaging going West

About 30 years ago an event that was to feature a spokesman from the Soviet Union was advertised in The Daily Universe. The announcement caught many by surprise since then BYU President Wilkinson had always maintained that a Communist would never touch campus soil.

The day of the speech a rather large, curious crowd was assembled. Soon a short, dark-haired man of sinister appearance strode onto the stage.

With a pronounced Eastern European accent and a shrill voice, he proceeded to rail against the supposed evils of capitalism and extoll the virtue of the Soviet "worker's paradise."

This went on for a few minutes and then the man's harangue abruptly ceased. Addressing the surprised audience in a normal tone, he told the students that if they were ever to meet a Communist, that was how one would appear.

The one time image of former Sovi iet Foreign Minister Gromyko angrily shouting "nyet!" or a stone-faced, trenchcoat-clad Communist robot with a monotone voice are things of the past.

The new Soviet spokesman in the United States has blow-dried hair, speaks with more of an East coast accent than an Eastern accent and with a sheepish grin spontaneously asks his interviewer if the Yankees swept today's doubleheader.

Vladimir Posner is a perfect example of the new Soviet media specialist. With a voice that sounds as sincere as that of Peter Jennings, he criss-crosses the United States telling Americans that understanding is the key to detente.

Posner has managed to image himself as a Soviet "Phil Donahue." He's appeared with Donahue several times and co-hosted from Moscow a "Donahue" show from the Soviet Union. Besides being featured in most leading U.S. periodicals, he's appeared on "Larry King Live," "Crossfire," "Nightline" and numerous weekend news shows.

The promoting of a new Communist image is not only confined to the East. In the American continent, Cuba and Nicaragua's image of revolutionaries clad in green fatigues has changed considerably.

Although he still wears fatigues, Fidel Castro has worked hard in recent years to promote an almost grandfatherly image of himself. News magazines are replete with pictures of the Cuban leader out in the public kissing babies, greeting citizens and teasing young hand-holding couples.

In Nicaragua, the change is much more advanced than in Cuba. The Daniel Ortega of today who sports expensive suits, designer glasses and who jokes with reporters is a far cry from the uniform clad, intense Ortega who visited Washington in the late 1970s.

In a brilliant public relations coup for Ortega, he allowed himself at a Chicago party to engage in a friendly debate with one of his harshest critics, Congressman Robert Dorman. The well-dressed Ortega listened thoughtfully to Dorman's criticisms and the mostly liberal partygoers, including the Rev. Jesse Jackson, were impressed by Ortega's statesmanlike appearance and willingness to listen.

But roughly during the same months Ortega visited the United States, his Sandinista military forces were relocating by force the Miskito Indians of Northern Nicaragua and supplying arms to the Colombian terrorists responsible for the massacre of that country's supreme court justices.

These new Communists, who speak so reasonably about arms control and no longer are quick to criticize only us, are accepted by an American populace who honestly wants to believe they are sincere.

The tiniest Marxist concession, whether it be the reopening of La Prensa in Nicaragua, the freeing of a few drug dealing Americans in Cuba or the opening of a McDonald's in Moscow, is greeted with wide smiles and unbridled optimism by America.

We, as Americans, feel uncomfortable having enemies. We want so badly to be friends with the Communist world that in our eagerness to accept a minor concession we overlook such incidents as the torture suffered by a Cuban dissident or the jailing of a Nicaraguan labor leader.

Despite the radiance of Raisa Gorbachev, the "good ol' boy" friendship of Jim Wright and Daniel Ortega and the embrace of Fidel Castro and Jesse Jackson, we have no idea if the Soviets really want arms control, or if they will cheat on the INF treaty. We don't know if Ortega and the FSLN are serious about the idea of bringing democracy to Nicaragua or whether horrifying secrets are lodged in Castro's prisons.

We forget that while Marxists are well versed in the art of propaganda, they also hold a firm belief that inexorable laws govern history. Jean Kirkpatrick has given us the wise advice that the only way to judge the promises of the new Bolsheviks is to observe how they use force against those weaker than themselves.

Kirkpatrick adds that those countries which subdue weaker rivals by force, overpower neighbors and bully allies cannot be expected to treat the United States differently in the future.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Fines a bargain

Dear Editor:

Regarding last Thursday's article "BYU traffic violation fines to go up," it's a shame that moving violation fines will finally be raised after nine years of stability. And to think that for these past nine years the fines for "dangerous violations resulting in personal injury or death" have only been twenty dollars! What a bargain! Imagine, for the past nine years I have been passing up the opportunity to maim and kill for only twenty bucks a shot! I can only wish that I knew about this little quirk in BYU's traffic laws as a freshman, so that I could have taken full advantage of this great pastime. Hopefully, the fine won't be increased so as to put this activity out of the financial grasp of starving students like me.

Mark Atchley
Santa Monica, Calif.

Understanding?

Dear Editor:

The Editorial Board of The Daily Universe shows little, or no, understanding for the purpose of the Surgeon General's report being mailed to American households. (Universe Opinion, May 12, 1988)

The Board seems to think the purpose of the brochure is to help control the AIDS epidemic. They believe this despite the fact that they quoted Koop's reason in the second paragraph of their opinion.

"We are taking this step because of the epidemic of misunderstanding about how AIDS is spread and how it is not spread seems, at times, as difficult to control as the epidemic itself."

The purpose is to try and control the misinformation about AIDS, not the disease itself.

The Board goes on to say that the high risk groups will probably never see the brochure and that they probably know more about how AIDS is spread than the average person. Both facts are true, that is why the brochure is being mailed to the "average person."

They continue, "Virtually every major newspaper, magazine, television and radio station has covered the outbreak of the virus since it became a public health threat." Again, very true. Through its coverage the media has helped to spread much of the misinformation about AIDS.

As an average person, who knows something about the subject of AIDS, it will be nice to find out, from a fairly reliable source, whether what I know is fact or fiction.

Silent service, not shrine

Dear Editor:

According to the May 17 issue of The Universe, BYU officers have been serving less than two weeks and have already planted a tree, buried a time capsule and attended a banquet. We can clearly see why President Holland considers these students to be the future of Brigham Young University.

After considering their highly publicized spiritual accomplishments, we would like to express our heartfelt appreciation to the newly ordained BYU officers for their noble efforts on our behalf.

The President's Council's next service project will undoubtedly be the erection of a new 160-foot BYU Rameumptom. Because of the sacred nature of the shrine, only the President's Council will be admitted.

One can imagine the words of the BYU officers in the Rameumptom's upper chambers (adapted from Alma 31:16-18):

"Holy God, we believe that thou hast separated us from our fellow students; and we do not believe in the traditions of our former student government, which was handed down to them by the childlessness of their fathers ... we also thank thee that thou hast elected us, that we may not be led away after the foolish traditions of our fellow students, who doth not publicize their service projects, which doth lead their hearts to wander far from thee ..."

Mark Crockett and BYU officers claim to have established a new set of values and virtues in their attempt to represent BYU students. From their own creed: "As members of the President's Council, we seek divine assistance in all our actions and commit to be examples of integrity and virtue by emulating Christ."

Haven't we all made commitments like that at one point or another? The only difference seems to be that the President's Council chooses to continually publish their spiritual conquests and commitments to the entire student body.

If Mark Crockett and BYU officers sincerely desire to emulate the Savior, let them serve as the Savior served ... silently and without hope for worldly attention and praise.

If a self-righteous, self-serving attitude is also part of their "newly released creed," we hope the President's Council will not continue to claim representation of BYU's student body.

SALT LAKE CITY — Jim Leavins scored on a wrist shot from 20 feet out to lift the Salt Lake Golden Eagles to a 3-2 International Hockey League Turner Cup playoff victory over Flint Tuesday and tie the series at 2-2.

Leavins' goal, which came after he took a pass from Doug Clark and crossed in front of the net, snapped a 2-2 tie.

DALLAS — Dallas center-forward Roy Tarpley's jaw dropped when Mavericks Coach John MacLeod told him Utah's Thurl Bailey had won the NBA Sixth Man Award that was announced Wednesday.

"My heart about hit the floor," Tarpley said. "Then he told me I had won it."

"I've been sitting on this for a week," MacLeod said after the Mavericks squeaked past the Denver Nuggets 110-106 in Game 5 of their NBA playoff series.

CHICAGO — Luis Alicea's bad hop single scored two runs in the 11th inning and lifted the St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs Tuesday.

With two outs in the 11th, Tom Brunansky, Bob Horner and Tony Pena hit consecutive singles to load the bases and set the stage for Alicea's game-winning hit.

SAN FRANCISCO — Left-hander Shane Rawley's two-hit, 3-0 victory over the sluggish San Francisco Giants was a bit of gold in a leaden season for his Philadelphia Phillies.

Rawley gave up hits to Candy Maldonado and Jose Uribe, and no Giant got past second base Monday night.

LOGAN — Tennis star Billie Jean King says grassroots programs, not exclusive academies, will help the United States regain its stature in world tennis and increase the number of players which has declined by 40 percent since 1979.

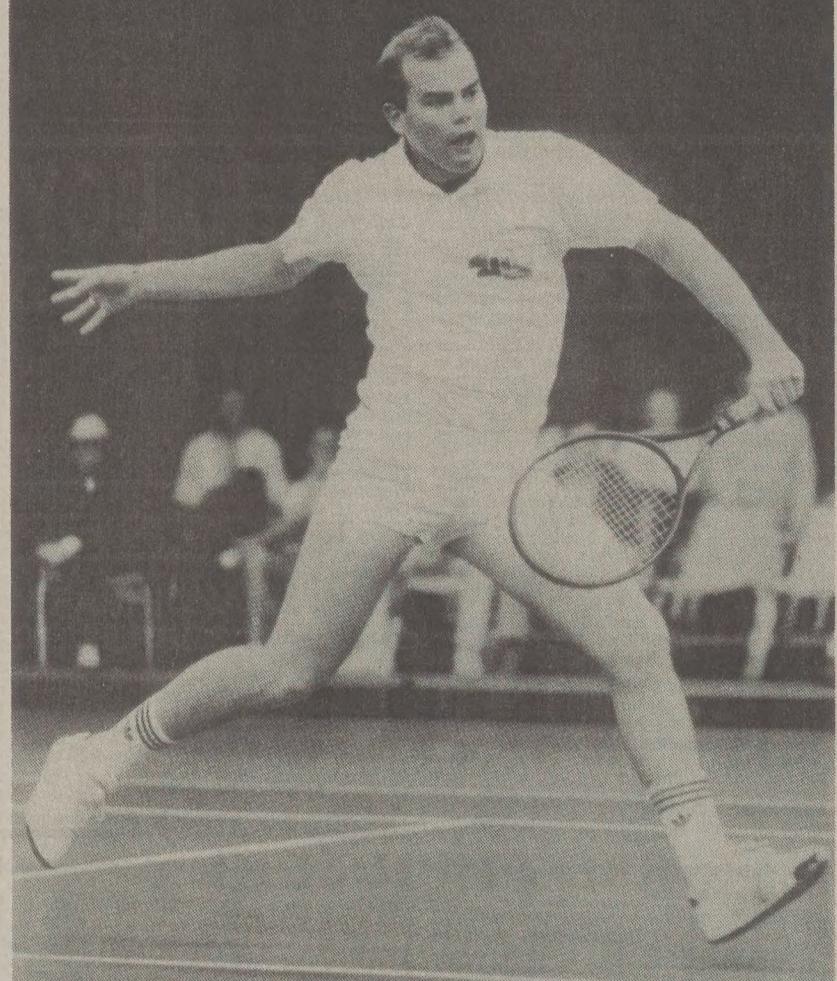

King hosted a free tennis exhibition and clinic in Logan Tuesday night as part of a 15-city tour aimed at focusing attention on recreational tennis programs.

LONDON — With the ski jumping season finished two months ago, Eddie "The Eagle" Edwards is still flying.

Not satisfied with throwing himself off a 90-meter ski jump, the Briton who captured the hearts of fans at the Calgary Winter Olympics by finishing last in his two events, now plans to jump out of a helicopter, strap himself to the wings of a plane at an air show, and become the first person to ride a horse over steeplechase hurdles while wearing skis.

Edwards, who arrived at Calgary as a 24-year-old plasterer and left a celebrity, said that, without people like him, sports are dull.

Cougars go to Hawaii for WAC playoff series

By DAN FAGETAN
Universe Sports Writer

BYU's regular baseball season ended Friday by dropping a double-header against Southern Utah State and splitting a doubleheader on Thursday with the University of Utah.

BYU won the first game Thursday, 8-3, then the University of Utah won the nightcap 18-17.

Utah rallied for two runs in the bottom of the ninth to grab an 18-17 victory after the Cougars won the first game by scoring eight runs in the seventh inning at Utah.

Utah's winning run came when center fielder Bruce Ellis lost Chad Bianco's fly ball in the sun.

The Southern Utah State Thunderbirds came up with some big plays against the Cougars to sweep the doubleheader 7-6 and 8-7 Friday.

The Thunderbirds were down by one run going into the bottom of the final inning of both games, but rallied each time to come up with one-run victories. "We've been creative lately in finding ways to lose," said BYU Coach Gary Pullins.

The WAC Baseball Playoffs, May 19-21 in Hawaii, include league-leading San Diego State, followed by BYU, Hawaii and Wyoming.

The tournament winner will receive an automatic berth to the NCAA regionals.

BYU, 38-16-1 overall and 20-6-1 for second place in Western Athletic Conference play, meets Hawaii (third in the WAC) Thursday to open the tournament.

"We have been playing spotty, but rique Guajardo. Harkness enters the championship sporting a 37-10 record while Guajardo holds a 31-7 season mark.

Harkness recently won the Western Athletic Conference championship singles title and is looking forward to NCAA competition. "You never know how these national tournaments will turn out," said Harkness. "I'll just go down there, do my best and see what happens."

During the WAC tournament, Harkness and Guajardo teamed up to win the conference doubles championships and receive an automatic NCAA tournament invitation.

Hall is encouraged by the team's recent performances. The Cougars have won 10 consecutive team matches to remain unbeaten since losing in mid-March to Fresno State.

"We are playing well right now and (we) proved ourselves in the conference tournament," Hall said. "We haven't played many ranked teams, but we beat Utah and New Mexico twice and they each had victories over teams in the top 20."

Hall views the playing conditions at the University of Georgia as one of his main concerns.

"The switch to a lower altitude and the slower courts will be the biggest change for us at Georgia," he said. "The balls are heavier and the courts are slow and hard."

As a transfer student from the University of Houston, BYU's Sean Morrison is the only Cougar netter with significant experience playing in these types of Southern conditions.

The Longhorns finished their 1987-88 season as the Southwest Conference runners-up and currently carry an 18-6 record.

Texas is anchored by senior Paul Koscielski. National tournament experience could be Koscielski's greatest asset as he makes his third straight NCAA championship appearance.

The Longhorns carry four freshmen and one sophomore on the team's roster. Despite the apparent lack of tournament experience, Texas has we're ready for the playoffs. The playoffs will be much more competitive because everyone knows each other," said Pullins.

"We knew that we would be near the top when the regular season ended," said Pullins.

"As the season progressed I thought Hawaii might take it." He said he didn't see San Diego beat Hawaii three times.

Mike Willes continues to lead the nation with 35 homers and 98 RBI's.

Utah hosts world climbers

By PAUL WILLIAMS
Universe Sports Writer

Snowbird will be host to men and women rock climbers from around the world when the International Sport Climbing Championships are held June 11-12.

The best technical climbers from all over the world will be at Snowbird to compete for a $20,000 purse by climbing a 120-foot high artificial wall which will be constructed alongside Snowbird's Cliff Lodge.

The opening qualifying rounds will be held June 8-9 when 60 climbers from the United States will compete for the opportunity to face the top climbers in the world.

Of the 60 climbers, four men and two women will be selected to compete against 36 world class climbers including Vasily Korchnoi of the Soviet Union, who has dominated climbing competitions in eastern Europe for the past decade, and Catherine Devestiville of France.

Jeff Lowe of Ogden, who is considered to be one of the top ice climbers in the world, is responsible for bringing the event to Snowbird.

Snowbird will be the Grand National Championship site for the next three years.

The event will be hosted by Snowbird owner Richard D. Bass, the oldest man to have climbed Mt. Everest.

The sport, originally done on natural rock, has developed into a highly technical one where climbers are pushed to new heights on artificial climbing surfaces constructed to imitate the texture of rock.

Students play BYU organs

By KENT GUNNELL
University Staff Writer

Organs at BYU promote a successful atmosphere for future music graduates as well as non-graduates, according to the university organist.

"There are presently two new organs that have been bought within the last year to increase learning opportunities studying organ," said Parley Belnap, a musicology professor.

The organs were donated to the university last fall.

There are 12 organs available for the non-major music student. "These organs are for the purpose of training non-major students in preparing them for future church service," said Belnap.

The two new organs and the 12 practice organs in the group organ teaching studio are located in the Harris Fine Arts Center.

There are three different types of organs: the tracker, the electropneumatic and the direct electric.

"The new organs are both tracker instruments in which the playing mechanism has a direct linkage from the key to the pipes," said Douglas Bush, professor of musicology. "Thus when the key is depressed, the player is actually opening the valve at the pipe base which lets air into the pipe and causes it to speak. The other two types use electronic means to open the pipe valves."

The new organs are both hand-crafted and custom-built.

The organ builders came to campus for three weeks to put the organs together, according to Bush.

bone, which is harder than ivory, and the pipes are made of a tin and lead combination, he said.

"These two organs have an extremely sensitive response to the touch and this helps develop good musicianship," said Bush.

The other organ is made of white oak and has two keyboards with five sets of pipes containing approximately 300 pipes. The builder is from Quebec, Canada.

Program is created to help strengthen family relationships

A weak family unit can make family members more vulnerable to such problems as anorexia, depression, drug abuse and even suicide, said the Utah County Coordinator for Families in Focus.

According to Vicki Parsley, Families in Focus, a non-profit family enrichment program designed to improve relationships in the family, was created by the Cooperative Extension service of Utah State University and the Cottage Program International.

"It (Families in Focus) provides families with the opportunity to identify their strengths and weaknesses through the use of discussion and a family profile questionnaire," she said.

The program's resource book identifies seven keys healthy families possess, said Parsley. "We give specific suggestions to improve each of the seven areas, but none of the activities are difficult."

The seven areas include basics such as spending time together, sharing goals and improving communication.

"For example, to encourage family members to express appreciation and trust, each family member could write down one good thing about each person in the family and then give it to that person," she said.

Parsley also said it was a good idea to limit the amount of time spent watching television. "A family may watch TV together, but it does not bring them closer. TV has become a sort of babysitter. If children are limited in the amount of TV time they are allowed, they will become more selective and parents can spend more time with them."

The Families in Focus program is an outgrowth of Cottage Program International's efforts to prevent alcoholism and drug abuse. They found that the substance abuser would receive treatment and improve, but would then return to the same family situation and resume his drug habit, said Parsley.

"The family needs to change along with the abuser," she said.

However, Families in Focus does not limit its program to those with a substance abuse problem.

Parsley said, "Even if your family is just not what you would like it to be, we can help."

Benefit held for Holmes' children

A carnival to raise money for the children of Anna Lee Holmes, who was killed last month in a Kearns video store, is being sponsored by the BYU 7th stake Saturday.

Holmes, who was eight months pregnant, was shot in the head during a robbery.

She was taken to University Hospital and was pronounced dead two minutes after the birth of her fourth child.

Dave Freeman, high council member of the BYU 7th stake of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints said, "The reason I am willing to work so hard on the carnival is because I want to make a statement about crimes like this one."

"Everything will be fairly inexpensive at the carnival because we want to get a lot of people to participate," he said.

Walter Ames, BYU LDS 7th stake president, said he hopes to raise $5000 for the Holmes fund at the carnival.

The students of the 7th stake have made the fundraiser possible, said Ames. He said the theme throughout the project has been, "Having fun for the right reasons."

The carnival will be held in the parking lots of the Glenwood and Riviera apartments from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Besides the carnival, fundraising activities will include a 5-K fun run and a dance.

URGENTLY NEEDED

For research study, the Health Center needs male and/or female patients who have developed diarrhea within the past 48 hours. You must be 18 years of age or over.

A stipend will be paid for your participation which is safe and painless. However, you can not be considered for this research if you have any of the following:

- Any treatment in the last 24 hours or any antibiotic in the last week.
